HISTORY OF THE NEWPORT COUNTRY CLUB

Newport Country Club is a private golf club in Newport, Rhode Island. Situated close to the Atlantic Ocean and the famous Ocean Drive, Newport Country Club enjoys a rich history as one of the five original member clubs of the United States Golf Association. In 1895 the Newport Country Club hosted both the first U.S. Amateur Championship and the first U.S. Open. In 1995, in celebration of the Championship's 100 year anniversary, the club hosted the U.S. Amateur Championship, which was won by Tiger Woods. To this day the Havemeyer Trophy, named after the founder of Newport Country Club, Theodore Havemeyer, is awarded to the U.S. Amateur Champion every year. Newport Country Club was also the venue of the 2006 U.S. Women's Open, which was won by Annika Sorenstam.

Newport Country Club is proud to be the site for the 41st U.S. Senior Open in June 2020.

Players' names, handicaps and tournament fees are due by September 1st
