HISTORY OF THE NEWPORT COUNTRY CLUB

Newport Country Club is a private golf club in Newport, Rhode Island. Situated close to the Atlantic Ocean and the famous Ocean Drive, Newport Country Club enjoys a rich history as one of the five original members clubs of the United States Golf Association.

In 1895 the Newport Country Club hosted both the first U.S. Amateur Championship and the first U.S. Open. In 1995, in celebration of the Championship's 100 year anniversary, the club hosted the U.S. Amateur Championship, which was won by Tiger Woods. To this day the Havemeyer Trophy, named after the founder of Newport Country Club Theodore Havemeyer, is awarded to the U.S. Amateur Champion every year. It was also the venue of the 2006 U.S. Women's Open, which was won by Annika Sörenstam.
